

Next-gen project

A next-gen project in Jira is a special, simplified type of project.

Facts about next-gen projects

Facts about next-gen projects

- Introduced in Jira for the first time in 2018

Facts about next-gen projects

- Introduced in Jira for the first time in 2018
(Jira was first released in 2002)

Facts about next-gen projects

- Introduced in Jira for the first time in 2018
(Jira was first released in 2002)
- Don't require Jira admin permissions to create

Facts about next-gen projects

- Introduced in Jira for the first time in 2018
(Jira was first released in 2002)
- Don't require Jira admin permissions to create
- Entities (issue types, statuses, etc.) live inside the project

Facts about next-gen projects

- Introduced in Jira for the first time in 2018
(Jira was first released in 2002)
- Don't require Jira admin permissions to create
- Entities (issue types, statuses, etc.) live inside the project
- Greatly simplified compared to Classic Projects

Comparing
next-gen projects and classic projects

Next-gen

Next-gen

Classic

Next-gen

- Project scope entities

Classic

Next-gen

- Project scope entities

Classic

- Global entities

Next-gen

- Project scope entities
- No special permissions needed to create them

Classic

- Global entities

Next-gen

- Project scope entities
- No special permissions needed to create them

Classic

- Global entities
- Must be Jira admin to create them

Next-gen

- Project scope entities
- No special permissions needed to create them
- Fast and easy to set up and maintain

Classic

- Global entities
- Must be Jira admin to create them

Next-gen

- Project scope entities
- No special permissions needed to create them
- Fast and easy to set up and maintain

Classic

- Global entities
- Must be Jira admin to create them
- More complicated to set up and maintain